One day a boy draws a parrot. But it is black and white.

A dog meets the parrot in the park.

“Why are you black and white? Where are your colours?” says the dog.

“I don't know. Am I ugly?” asks the parrot.

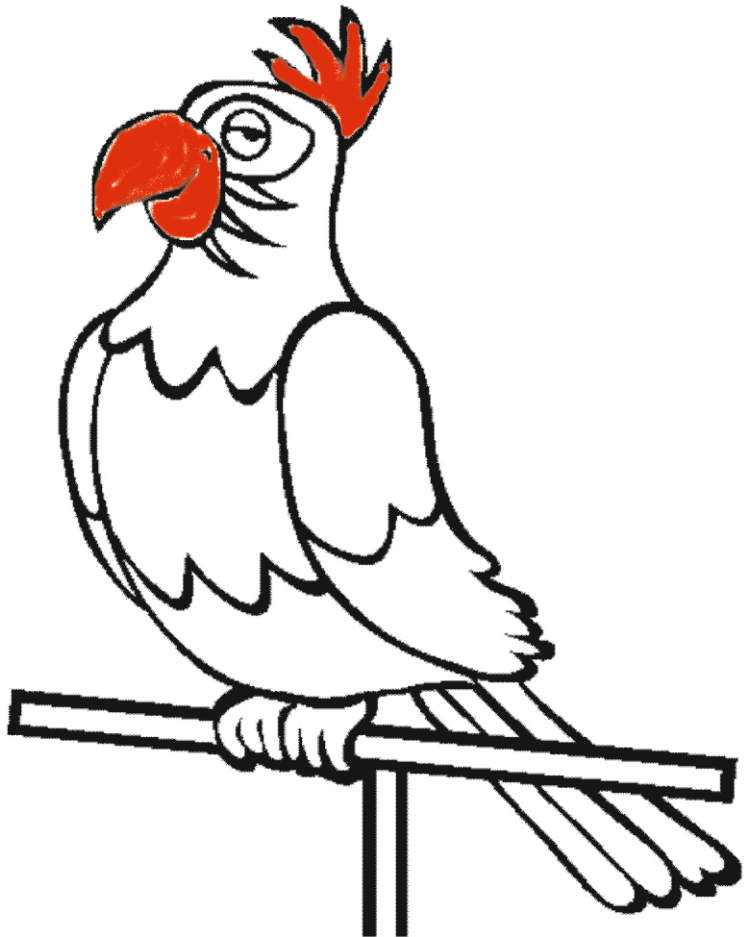

“No, you aren't. Don't be sad! Go to the paints. They can help you”, says the dog.

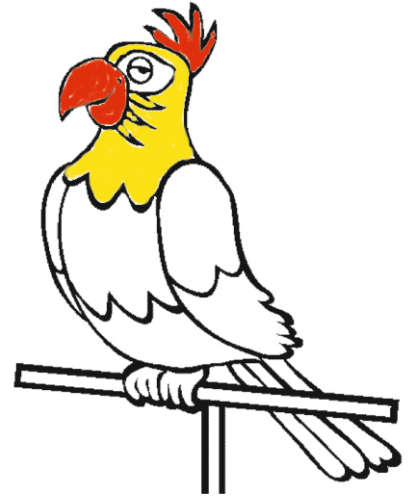

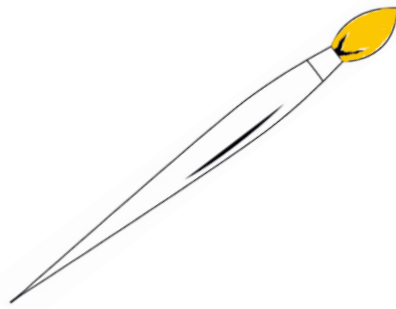

The parrot goes to the paints.

“Paints, paints, please, help me! Give me colours!” says the parrot.

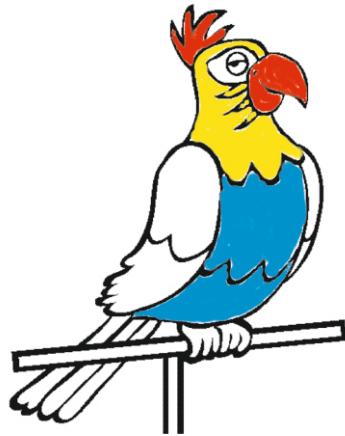

“Ok, let me see you,” says the red paint. And it paints the parrot's crest and beak in red.

The yellow paint gives colour to the parrot's head.

Soon the bird's body is in blue.

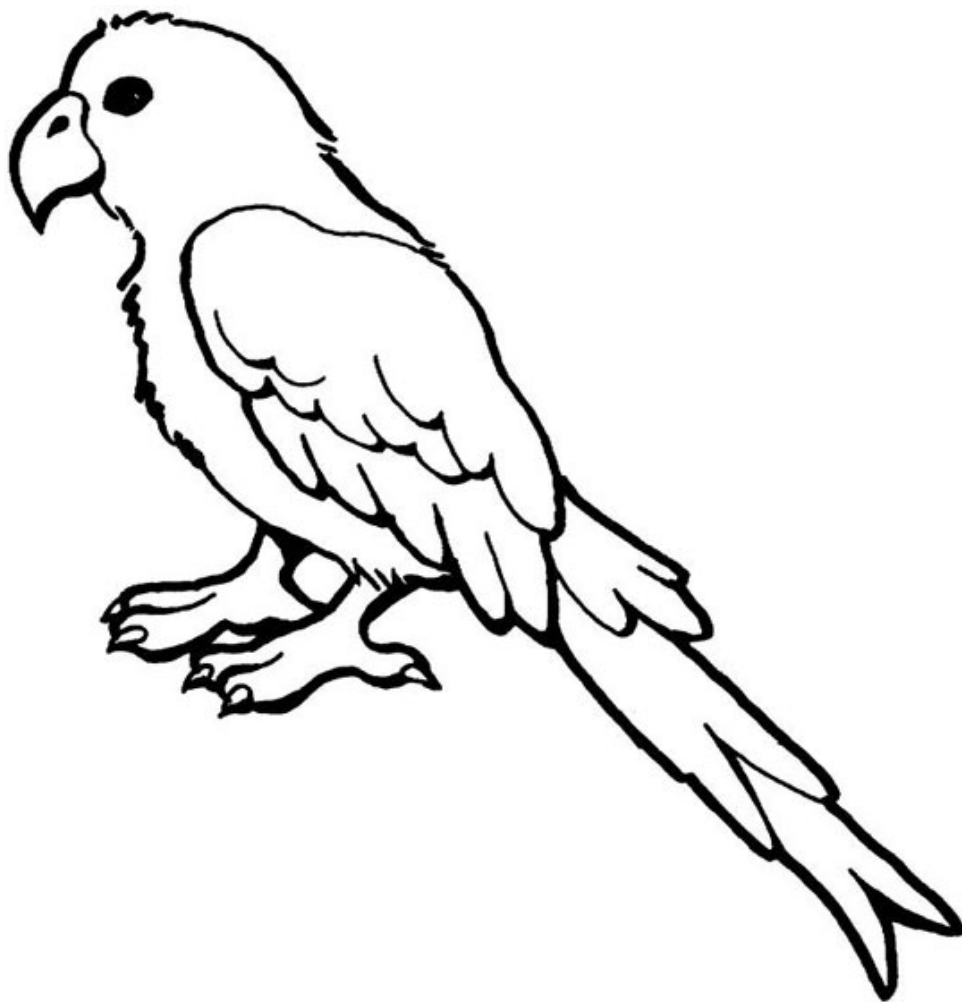

The orange brush paints the parrot's wings. And the green brush paints the tail.

Now the bird is happy. It goes back to the dog.

“Look at you! Now you are a real parrot!” says the dog.

And here is your parrot. Colour it in bright colours.
